Mayor Frank Moran and City Council proudly support the City of Camden's Arts, Cultural and Heritage Commission

CAMDEN, NJ – Mayor Francisco “Frank” Moran, City Council President Curtis Jenkins and members of City Council are pleased to support the efforts of the Arts, Cultural and Heritage Commission. The newly formed Commission held its first organizational meeting on Tuesday, January 16th, 2018 at Camden City Hall.

The advisory body which was established through City Council ordinance, consists of a nine member commission. The commission’s primary focus will be to ensure public access to arts, culture and historical heritage of the City through interactions with Camden residents and guests.

Members are tasked with helping to develop quality city-wide arts and history programs, the creation of public art, supporting artist services, developing youth arts programming, promoting community art events and celebrations which concern significant historical and cultural matters.

“Our goal is to foster a creative, diverse and friendly community that serves all Camden residents,” said Camden Mayor Frank Moran. “The arts can play a huge role in the development and rebirth of a community. I am confident in the commission and look forward to working with the members as we celebrate the art, culture and history of Camden.”

“I wholeheartedly support the efforts of the new Arts, Cultural and Heritage Commission,” said Camden City Council President Curtis Jenkins. “I think the commission will help us engage and interact with the community as the City develops new ways to promote all that Camden has to offer. Camden has a talented arts community and such a rich history which must be touted.”
